* * * REGULATORY UPDATE * * *

Do You Have a Tank Car With a Leaking Outlet Valve or Defective Closure?

If you do, and even if it has only a non hazardous residue inside, you need written FRA approval prior to moving that car to a repair facility. What's more, you need approval to move that tank car if it has any leaking valve or defective closure. A defective closure also includes damaged (punctured, ripped, torn, etc.) interior coils. Please refer to 49 CFR 174.50.

It may be easy to think it is someone else who must do this, especially if it is a leased rail car. However, please remember, if you are the one giving the car to the railroad, the FRA will be asking you how it got into interchange without approval, because the entity offering a railcar in interchange is the responsible party. In addition, there are significant civil penalties for violation of these regulations.

Requests for FRA approval should be directed to:

Hazardous Materials Division
Office of Safety Assurance and Compliance
Federal Railroad Administration

As always, TransMatrix, Inc. is ready to help. Please contact us and we will do whatever we can to get your car to the shop and back into service as soon as possible.
