Where Did The Year Go?

Our grandmothers used to tell us "The older you get, the faster time flies". We never understood exactly what she meant by that but as we get older it becomes clearer. Obviously a one minute time span today is going to equal a one minute time span ten years from now. It isn't the amount of time we have, it's the amount of things we have to do in that time. As children we all wished for the holidays to get here as quickly as possible. As an adult we wish for more time before the holidays to get everything prepared. As children we found ourselves wishing for the school day to get done and now wish we had more time to get work done.

Well, the holidays have come and gone and 2004 is just another chapter in the history books. Now we find ourselves planning for the new year and determining what goals we have to accomplish before another year flies by. No matter what form of business you are in, transportation and logistics is a common thread and a major time consumer. We all have something to ship or receive. And if you think about it, almost everything we use, in one form or another, has been shipped by rail. TransMatrix, Inc. understands this, that's the reason we handle all forms of rail equipment and services.

We look forward to the new year and the possibility of helping you slow down time. Happy New Year!
