FEELING OVERTAXED?

Well, chances are you have been! If you paid for long distance service, whether stand-alone or bundled after February 28, 2003, and before August 1, 2006, you probably are entitled to a tax refund. During this time, the Government collected a federal excise tax on long distance services. Several recent federal court decisions have held that the tax does not apply to long distance service as it is billed today. This refund is for the 2006 tax year only and affects over 160 million filers, including both individuals and businesses.

In general, any individual, business or nonprofit organization that paid the tax for long distance or bundled service billed after Feb. 28, 2003, and before Aug. 1, 2006, is eligible to request the refund.

So, how many hoops do you have to jump through to get this refund? That really depends on your choice of methods for determining your refund. Both businesses and individuals have options here. For both, you can simply dig up 41 months of phone bills and determine the exact amount (be sure to use the appropriate form) or there are also other options the IRS has made available to simplify the process. For example, individuals may opt to use the exemption method. Based upon the number of your filing exemptions, refunds range from $30 to $60 per filer. For businesses, it's not as simple as the method for individuals but much easier than looking for records for a 41 month period.

Keep in mind that this is a tax refund, not a deduction, so you get the full amount refunded or as a reduction of the tax you may owe. For complete information regarding this refund, please refer to www.irs.gov and click on the Telephone Excise Tax Refund link.
